"His Majesty, the Emperor, arrived in Berlin last night for a short stay."

During the Kaiser's sojourn in East Prussia three German aeroplanes are flying continuously over his headquarters. Skilful Russian airmen have been showing much activity since the arrival of the Kaiser there and hence the precautions that have been made to protect him from attack.

Fire of Allies Sinks Rafts Filled With Germans on Yser

Copyright, 1914, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York World.)

NORTHEASTERN FRANCE, Dec. 4.—Fierce fighting is now taking place along a considerable portion of the battle line. The Germans have anticipated the concerted forward movement of the allies by making a spirited attack themselves.

The allies have not been taken by surprise and are now in a position to bid their time. The new German offensive will probably not cause them to change their well matured plans. This new attack so far has met with no success.

It has extended more or less along the whole line, but has concentrated principally to the north of Ypres and on toward Dixmude. The fighting has been most severe, but all attacks have been successfully repulsed.

In the dark hours before dawn yesterday morning a large force of Germans crossed the flood waters of the Yser by means of broad rafts. The venture was a desperate one, for not a man was out on it could have been ignorant of the fact that death was almost certainly awaiting him.

The rafts were punted through the shallow waters in dead silence. Each carried about fifty or sixty men and machine guns. Awaiting the dawn another fleet of rafts drawn by motor boats was on the German side of the muddy waters, but before dawn came the plot was discovered and when daylight did arrive the artillery of the allies met the advancing Germans with devastating effect.

Yet in spite of their losses these Germans, brave even to madness, still essayed the crossing. They were partially covered by a heavy cannonade of their field artillery and until midday still persisted in their plan. Several rafts were upset in midstream by the fire of the French guns and a great number of Germans were drowned as well as shot.

The attack eventually ceased after the Germans had suffered great losses in men and machine guns, but the artillery kept up a determined bombardment of the allied positions, meeting with a vigorous reply.

The Germans have withdrawn their heavy artillery, on account of the muddy country, but they have now brought into action a new weapon, which is exceedingly well adapted to the changed nature of the warfare. Numbers of light guns with a range up to seven kilometres have been mounted on powerful motor trucks, solidly constructed and fitted with exceptionally large springs.

These keep the guns steady while it is being fired and break the force of the recoil. The obvious advantage of this is that the guns can be moved quickly along roads which would be impossible to guns of heavy calibre.

Many of these guns were supposed to be at work yesterday. Around Ypres yesterday the positions held by the French, and British were fiercely attacked, but the allies managed in main to hold their ground.

Russians Report an Attack On Outer Defenses of Cracow

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4 (United Press).—An attack upon the outer defenses of Cracow is reported to-day. With Wlaskowa now held by the Russians, the enveloping movement at Cracow is progressing and the city, it is said, will soon be completely invested.

The attempt of the Germans to turn the Russian left flank in the Lodz region is declared to have been successfully resisted, while the enemy is being seriously threatened by the movement northwest from Lodz, which is now held by the Russians.

The Russians, it is asserted, have extended their line further along the Vistula.

Heavy reinforcements are being rushed forward by the Germans toward the southern end of the line and at least five corps are believed to have reached Cracow.

A strong movement by these forces along the railroad toward Radomsk and Piotrkow in an attempt to relieve the pressure on the centre is anticipated.

NEW BAFF EVIDENCE PROMISES TO SOLVE THE SECRET OF MURDER

new element in the solution of the case, it was said to-day the search for the "murder car" used by the two gunmen in escaping from West Washington Market had now narrowed down to five possible automobiles. This represented the elimination of 99 other cars whose license plates bore the same two first digits as those observed on the car used by the gunmen.

Any one of these five cars would fit the description given to the detectives by the three employees of the piano manufactory, whose auto truck was drawn up directly behind the "murder car" at the Ganesvoort side of the market.

To-day these eyewitnesses will be taken to view the five cars. SUSPECT FOUND TRYING TO GET ALIBI.

The elaborate alibi built up by one of the suspects in the case, which hinges on the receipt of a telephone message about 7 o'clock on the evening of Dec. 1, was shattered, furnished to-day fertile field for investigation by some of the detectives. Already under suspicion, this individual appears to have got deeper into the mire by his extraordinary pronouncements to establish the fact of his presence in New Jersey at the minute Dec. 1 was shot.

It was not believed in the police that this person was one of the actual slayers. The fact that he varied his usual custom of returning from the Jersey freight yards to the West Washington Market on the night of the murder and remained on the opposite side of the river until he received a telephone message only adds to the police conviction that this suspect was one of the slayers.

On the basis of the murder plot, the police are now making a search of the records of the telephone exchange at the time of the murder.

CHURCH SERVICE ON BATTLEFIELD AS SHELLS FALL

Austria-Hungary's Soldiers Pray at Rude Altar Amid Russian Cannonade.

PRIEST RISKS HIS LIFE.

General Attends Mass and Bestows Medals on Men for Heroic Deeds.

By William G. Shepherd.

PRZEMYSL, Nov. 1 (By courier to Vienna, thence by mail to New York) [United Press].—It is evening of Sunday. I went to church this morning. It was a service of war time, on a battlefield, held on a hillside amid a litter of trenches and rifle shelters. Two batteries of howitzers in the valley, 300 yards distant, boomed at intervals and our own Austro-Hungarian shells screamed high over the improvised altar and went their ways to kill while we were praying that we ourselves might pass through the war unscathed.

Imagine a group of hills and valleys covering an area as large as the city of Chicago; you stand on the safe side of the hill nearest the Russian lines. You're near the top of the hill and you have orders not to show your head above the rim, for the slightest movement there might give the Russian lookouts the range. From your hillside you look to the other hills. Across them come files of soldiers in gray, narrow files moving over the slopes like gigantic, gray worms.

This is to be a service for the Tyrolean sharpshooters, the Eighty-eight Austro-Hungarian Regiment. These men who are marching through cold gray morning are straight from the trenches, where they have lain for three weeks. The black earth is on their clothes, hands, faces. The hill is steep and it is necessary for them to raise their faces in order to fasten their eyes on the altar.

The altar is a simple affair. It is only a small lean-to made of fresh pine boards. There is a "Christ-mass" air about it, for it is decorated with pine boughs, amid which candles flicker with a pale ghostly effect in the daylight.

GEN. SCHONBURG ATTENDS SERVICE AMID SHELLS.

The priest is waiting. He is a short man with a beard, kindly-eyed and ruddy-faced—a pilot of men who at any moment may take the short, quick journey into eternity. Big boots and a heavy overcoat appear under his white and gold vestments. He remains bareheaded and the raw wind moves the hair on his face and head.

A soldier comes along near the brow of the hill, stringing a wire on the ground behind him. He lays a small box and a telephone receiver on the ground near the altar. Gen. Schonburg, the brigade commander, is coming to church this morning, and he must be in touch with headquarters every moment.

More lines of men pass through the valley and climb the hill. They range themselves behind the first comers. From another part of the slope, a huge, tall man, accompanied by neatly dressed officers, appears and shakes hands with the priest. The big man is Gen. Schonburg.

By this time over a thousand men are grouped midhill, a hundred feet below the altar. They are given "At ease!" and stand as much as possible with fifty pounds of pack on each back and a cold, raw wind going. The priest turns to his lean-to, faces the rude altar and kneels. The mass for soldiers, the living and the dead, is begun. At various junctures where the service requires that the worshippers kneel and cross themselves, the soldiers raise their hands to their caps in salute. Their General kneels humbly on the earth and crosses himself with heavily gloved hands.

Then the priest talks to the soldiers. His text is, "Letters From Home." He calls the soldiers, "My war companions." He says: "I know how much it means to all of you to get a letter from home. It is the letter from home that encourages us most. But I have for you all, this morning, a letter from home—our last and best hope. This letter tells us that when we get there, a welcome will be awaiting such as we have never known before; such as even those we love back in the Tyrol Mountains could not give us. In these times of death, we cannot tell who will be dead and who will be alive to-morrow. I pray you all be ready and worthy for the welcome that Heaven will give us."

WOMAN WITNESS WHO DEFILES COURT MAY BE INDICTED

Mrs. Siegel Is Held Pending Grand Jury Investigation of Contempt Charge.

Mrs. Stella Fassberg Siegel, twenty-two years old, after defying Assistant District Attorney Edwards and Judge Rosinsky in General Sessions for two days, was removed to-day from the witness stand on her refusal to give evidence against her husband and the court was adjourned to give the Grand Jury a chance to indict her for contemptuous conduct and criminal contempt of court.

The young woman, a petite brunette beauty, caused the arrest of Leo D. Siegel in April, 1913, for forcing her to support him. They were not married. He was released on $5,000 bail and promptly married Miss Fassberg. The District Attorney then consented to his being relieved of bail and he was put under the observation of a probation officer.

Recently it was learned he had separated from his wife and was living with another woman on West Forty-fourth Street. He was rearrested and was put on trial Wednesday, with his wife as the complaining witness against him.

"I refuse to answer on the ground that it would tend to incriminate and degrade me," she said, and would make no other reply even when Judge Rosinsky took a hand.

"But you testified before the Grand Jury did you not?" asked Mr. Edwards.

"The Grand Jury hearing was in secret," snapped the little woman, her eyes flashing. "Here in open court, with newspaper reporters present, I refuse to bare my past life."

Judge Rosinsky ordered her locked in the House of Detention between court sessions, but Mrs. Siegel's spirit was not in the least broken. The remonstrances of her counsel, Clark L. Jordan, were not needed to keep her spunky. She waved them impatiently aside.

SHOWS A TELEGRAM HE SAYS ROCKEFELLER SENT ON MINE STRIKE

Labor Man Says Message to Operators Shows John D. Jr. Was Directing Power.

DENVER, Dec. 4.—John R. Lawson, Colorado member of the Colorado International Executive Committee of the United Mine Workers of America, announced to-day that John McLennan, President of District 15, who has been summoned as a witness before the Industrial Relations Commission, would introduce a telegram from John D. Rockefeller Jr., giving instructions regarding the conduct of the operators toward the Colorado coal miners' strike.

Lawson gave to the press the text of the alleged telegram, which he said was sent on April 30, after the battle of Ludlow, the worst of the mine riots, to Jesse F. Welborn and L. M. Bowers of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. Lawson asserts the message proves the miners' contention that Rockefeller was the actual directing hand of the operators in the Colorado strike. The telegram given out by Lawson read:

"Referring to my telegram of this morning, repeating telegrams from and to Dr. Foster, Chairman of the Congressional Strike Probe Committee, the letter of Gustav Ammons, Nov. 27 to the operators and miners shows that at that time the only obstacle to a settlement was recognition of the union. He then suggested a solution covering all points except recognition and the operators accepted this suggestion, invited their employees, who had not been guilty of disorder and other unlawful acts, to return on terms mentioned by him and assured him and their former employees that they would conform in good faith to all of his suggestions."

"It seems to us that the operators should call Dr. Foster's attention to these facts and reiterate their willingness to accept this settlement. By so doing they will place themselves in a very strong position before the public, in that it would be evident that all the disorder, since Nov. 27, has been due to the refusal of the union to accept the settlement which was then proposed by the Governor and accepted by the operators, but rejected by the miners. Unless, in the present time, there has been an important change in the situation, as stockholders and directors we strongly urge that the operators make reply to Dr. Foster along these lines."

CHICAGO WILL RUN ITS OWN TANGO SCHOOL

Having Started Municipal Balls, the City Will Now Teach the Latest Dancing Steps.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—A municipal dancing school is to be opened by the city of Chicago next week. Not only that but the fox trot, the tango and other new dances frowned on by righteous persons are to be taught the unsophisticated youth.

And this is the town that first pulled the curtain on September 1913.

Mrs. I. Z. Meder, director of public welfare, made the announcement to-day. She peered at the latest steps at the second of a series of municipal balls last night and decided to O. K. them.

"At first I was determined that only waltzes and two-steps should be danced at the municipal balls," said Mrs. Meder. "But after watching young couples dance the new steps I feel that the old dances are doomed and we might as well reach the young people through the dances they like best."

A west side dance hall, the license of which was revoked by Mayor Harrison several weeks ago, will house what probably will be the first municipal dancing school in America. For ten cents any one in Chicago will be taught the latest steps.

HAS $6,000 INCOME BUT CAN'T AFFORD MOVIES FOR SON

Mrs. Ducas Tells Court of Woes of "Poor Little Rich Boy."

SPURNED $500 CHECKS.

"My Father Junk Dealer? I Don't Know What Junk Means!" She Says.

Mrs. Rachelle N. Ducas, whose pretty ankles nearly clogged the wheels of justice a year ago, took the stand before Supreme Court Justice Blanchard to-day to deny the charge made by her husband, Benjamin P. Ducas, a rich manufacturing chemist, whom she is suing for an increase in alimony, that having been a junk dealer's daughter before she married him she is not entitled to live as an aristocrat now that she is separated from him.

The young woman, who is ten years her husband's junior, came all the way from Muelhausen, in Alsace, where she spent two months as a Red Cross nurse, to show the court that she and her thirteen-year-old son, Robert, cannot live on the allowance of $6,000 a year which they receive under a separation agreement which has been in effect more than six years.

Two women who came into court with Mrs. Ducas spent the morning knitting stockings for soldiers. SHE SPURNED NINE FIVE HUNDRED DOLLAR CHECKS.

As a spurrier of large alimony Mrs. Ducas gained distinction at the opening of the trial by producing nine checks, each for $500, which her husband had sent her, but which she refused to accept because they were not sufficient to meet her expenses and those of her son.

Mrs. Ducas said that she could neither indulge herself or son in small luxuries on $6,000 a year and she produced her own set of books—dainty little seal covered memorandums—to prove she had to scratch to get along on $10,000 a year.

As for such luxuries as the movies, theatres and concerts, she said her son could not afford to enjoy them.

"I finally had to forbid him going to the homes of the children who entertained him," said Mrs. Ducas, "because he could not reciprocate."

"It costs me $3,082 a year to maintain and educate him now, and I cannot give him extras on that amount."

He gets only $1 a week pocket money," she concluded, sadly.

It cost Mrs. Ducas just $1,001 to maintain herself last year. I am just barely living," she sighed, "and I cannot entertain."

WONT PRONOUNCE NAME AS HUSBAND DOES.

On cross examination at the hands of Judge W. P. Hatch, counsel for Mr. Ducas, the fair witness insisted on dropping the "s" in her pronunciation of her name. She put a decided French accent on it.

"Mr. Ducas pronounces his own name 'Duke-cas' doesn't he?" asked Judge Hatch.

"The name is French; it belongs to the country, France, and I pronounce it as it should be pronounced," the witness replied.

Judge Hatch then endeavored to have her say her father's business was in iron and clothes.

"He does deal in iron and woolens," said the witness. "He buys and sells them."

"Isn't he a junk dealer then?" asked Judge Hatch.

"I don't know what junk means," replied the witness.

NEWS SELLER INDICTED.

Two Others Also Accused by the Grand Jury.

Henry L. Linder, the telegraph operator accused of stealing a decoy Associated Press despatch from the office of the Globe, where he was employed, and sending it to the New York News Bureau, was indicted this afternoon by the Grand Jury, and his bail of $5,000 continued.

Upon Linder's request he was permitted to go before the Grand Jury. He told them that he had no idea that he was doing anything wrong; that his predecessor, A. L. Patton, who was an assistant to the managing editor of the Globe, told him openly to "give the New York News Bureau anything they wanted."

Patton was indicted, and so was James Rice, an official of the news bureau. The offense consists in betraying the contents of a telegram and it is punishable with $2,000 fine, or two years' imprisonment, or both.
